

UPCOMING WORKSHOP: Talking about Taxes

When we talk about taxes, it's important to understand the lens through which Americans see budgeting and taxation issues, and what underlying assumptions they bring to the table. In the midst of a state budget crisis and the recent approval of a new sales tax, there has been an ongoing conversation about budgets and taxes in Kansas.

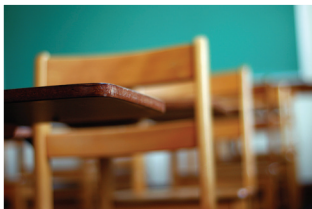

Learn how we can make the conversation more productive.

Join us for a complimentary workshop with the Frameworks Institute on how to effectively talk about budget and tax issues in Kansas. Frameworks will share its latest findings - just completed in Summer 2010 - and provide you with evidence-based tools for how you can have more productive conversations about these difficult issues. This session is designed for government affairs and communications professionals, as well as others advocating for priorities like education, transportation, children's issues and social services.
