2005 ANNUAL REPORT

We support programs and projects that demonstrate a direct benefit to persons who are medically indigent and underserved.

Equal access. It's within reach. The REACH Healthcare Foundation is a community resource dedicated to improving access to healthcare for persons who are indigent and underserved through financial support of worthy projects.

Our VISION is that all persons living in communities served by The REACH Healthcare Foundation will have the information and access to healthcare they need to live healthier lives.

Our MISSION is to assess community health needs and allocate our energy and resources to programs that make a positive and measurable impact on the health of members of the communities we serve, with a particular emphasis on the underserved and indigent.

"Do not wish upon a star.

Dear Friends,

We encourage you to "turn the page" of our annual report to the community... much like our organization turned the page in 2005. The year 2005 was the first in the REACH Healthcare Foundation's brief history in which we began to bring to life stories of accessible healthcare for our neighbors in greatest need. The REACH Healthcare Foundation awarded more than 1.7 million dollars in first-ever grants in 2005 to community projects focused on oral health, mental health and safety net services for the poor, uninsured and underserved.

The community advisory committee, or CAC, sprang to life to expertly begin fulfilling their role of advising the REACH Board of Directors. By drawing on its collective members' experience and knowledge of the community, the CAC and Board began functioning as a united entity to fulfill our mission and purpose.

Our staff began to take shape, as did our efforts to professionalize our operations, investment and governance infrastructures. And in contrast to what many perceived as the contentious formation of two healthcare foundations from the same sale of Health Midwest, REACH and its sister organization, the Health Care Foundation of Greater Kansas City, took great strides this year to work together, share and help improve one another.

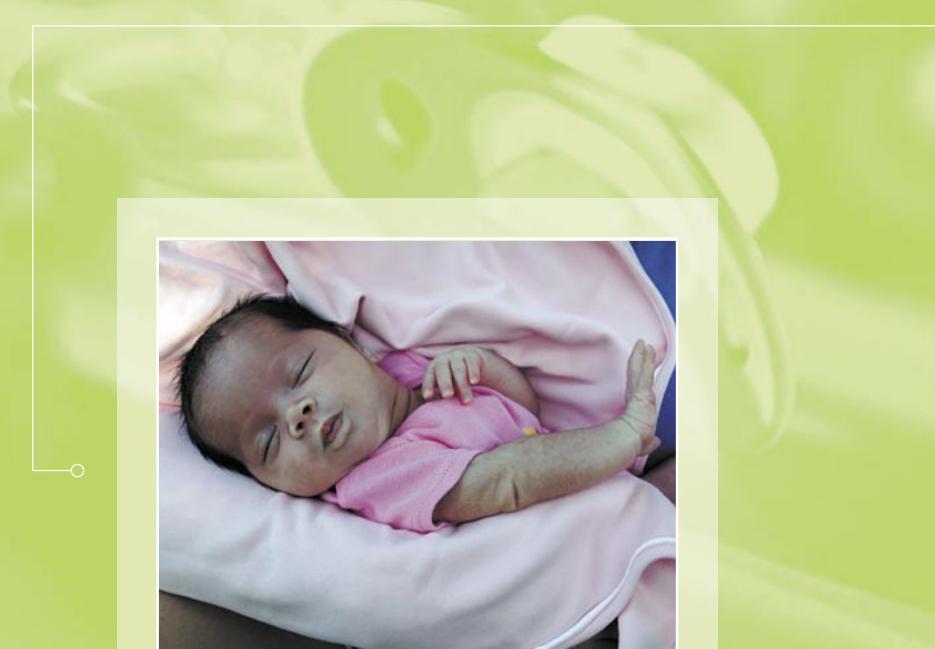

Experience with us the stories of real people and organizations that have committed themselves to putting equal healthcare access within reach.

REACH helps rock the cradle

Since 1976, Catholic Community Services, also known as Catholic Charities, has helped thousands of at-risk newborns and their mothers. As well as providing excellent medical care, the organization's Infant and Maternal Home Health program offers parenting instruction, social services, and supplies, such as formula, diapers, car seats and blankets.

With few agencies in the Kansas City area providing mother-infant programs of this magnitude, huge numbers of mothers in need rely on Catholic Charities for critical help. The program serves approximately 1,500 mothers and nearly 2,000 babies per year, according to Dr. Mike Jurkovich, Director of Healthcare Services. He said the majority of clients are very young mothers, with no support system at home.

Jurkovich said the contributions of the REACH Healthcare Foundation were much appreciated.

"Despite the fact that we are supported by a lot of generous donors and philanthropies, we need grants like these to sustain the program," Jurkovich said.

The recent contribution of the REACH Healthcare Foundation has helped continue that tradition of excellence in Wyandotte and Johnson counties. One student at a time, health fairs help | Annual Report 2005

Associated Youth Services, a neighborhood-based agency with more than... 30 years of service to the area, conducted the program, now in its fourth year.

One student at a time, health fairs help

One lucky Kansas City boy recently found a ticket to wellness by way of a routine blood pressure check. During a health fair at his school, screeners discovered that his blood pressure was extremely high. Contact was made with the school nurse, who facilitated the student's immediate care.

The procedure was one of many offered in the Kansas City, Kansas, school district this year, where 14 health fairs were held between October and April.

The 1,896 screenings performed comprised dental and vision check-ups, and readings of height, weight, blood pressure and Body Mass Index. In addition to the screenings, about 30 community organizations provided education on such topics as substance abuse and sexuality.

Debra Terrell, AYS Senior Vice-President, credited the REACH Healthcare Foundation with expanding the program this year to include middle schools and the alternative school, as well as the usual four participating high schools.

> "The REACH Healthcare Foundation was truly instrumental in helping our clients who have a lot of unmet health needs," Terrell said.

REACH sinks its teeth into needed dental care

Angela Henry goes to work each day with the same mantra as the organization for which she works: To make a positive difference in the lives of those she serves. As director of the Allen County, Kansas, after-school program SAFE BASE, Henry has done just that.

A health readiness clinic was held during August school enrollment and offered general health information, dental check-ups and head lice screening. The REACH grant also provided $32,000 in dental care for those most in need. Volunteer dentists and hygienists, working in makeshift conditions with portable dental chairs, provided the dental checkups.

Henry hopes the on-going program will expand to the other Allen County school districts in the near future.

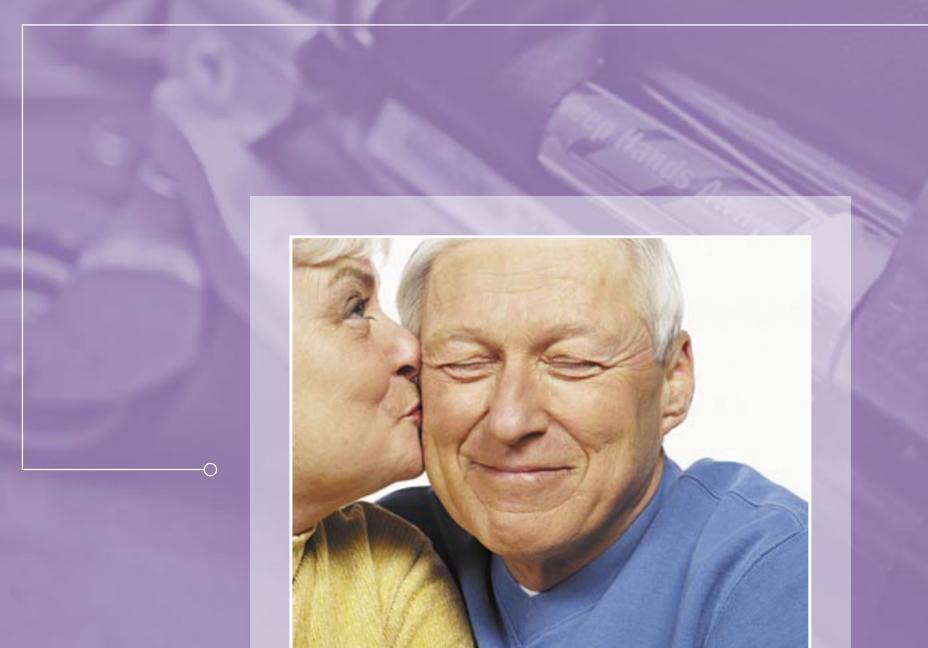

Allen County ranks among the most impoverished in the state, with 50% of elementary students qualifying for the free and reduced lunch program.

"One student needed dental treatment to all but two teeth," Henry said. "Another girl, who complained her mouth hurt, ended up with $6,000 worth of care."

New beds crank up quality of life for area patients

Roberta Lindbeck, Director of Development and Community Relations for the center, said the 27 electric beds and 27 pressure-reducing mattresses provided by REACH allowed patients more mobility and independence. "Before we received the beds, patients had to wait to have their beds hand-cranked into a comfortable position by busy staff members," she said.

The acquisition of the beds was a big step toward the goal of replacing all old beds with electric beds. The center currently houses 102 residents.

Lindbeck, who works exclusively on soliciting funds for the center, said she was glad to work with REACH to improve the quality of care for residents there.

"The people at the REACH Foundation were caring, helpful and just wonderful to work with," Lindbeck said.

For 27 residents of the Johnson County Nursing Center in Olathe, Kansas, life became much more comfortable in 2005, thanks to the REACH Healthcare

Foundation.
